EXPERIENCE WITH BOTH SIDES OF LAWSUITS GIVES PARALEGAL JOY HENDERSON AN EDGE

Joy Henderson, a resident of Auburn, has rejoined the Sacramento law office of Anderson & Kriger with a new level of experience.

Henderson is a paralegal who worked on the homeowner side of construction defect lawsuits at A&K from 2002-2005. Then she moved to the defense side with a Roseville construction defect law firm where she represented builders and developers for about two years.

Now with experience from both plaintiff and defense perspectives, Henderson has been re-hired by A&K as a Sacramento paralegal and marketing assistant for the Yuba City, Live Oak and Wheatland area of Sutter County. "Joy brings a lot energy and enthusiasm to our team in the Sacramento office," said Clayton Anderson, senior partner of the firm. "With experience on both sides of the table, she will be in a position to help our client homeowners get the compensation they deserve for problems in their homes, such as leaks, cracks and soil subsidence."

Paralegals at A&K are an integral part of the team. They draft pleadings and legal correspondence, schedule and attend site inspections and destructive testing, prepare site documentation and photography, draft documents for trial, and prepare for an attend mediation conferences and court trials.

Henderson earned a paralegal certificate at MTI College of Business & Technology in Sacramento and is a member of the Sacramento Valley Paralegal Association.

Anderson & Kriger has its home office in La Mesa and, in addition to Sacramento, operates offices in Orange County, Temecula, Riverside, Bakersfield and Antelope Valley. Because the firm practices only in California, Anderson believes its plaintiff clients benefit from the firm's greater knowledge of developers and insurance companies doing business in the state, as well as state laws.
